A. BACKGROUND

The duration of a student's studies is one of the key performance indicators in the delivery of higher education, reflecting the effectiveness of the learning process, the quality of academic services, and the institution's success in managing the education system efficiently and sustainably. A duration of study that aligns with ideal standards indicates that curriculum planning, the delivery of learning, and the academic guidance system are functioning optimally and in an integrated manner.

In the context of higher education quality assurance, the evaluation of students' duration of study plays a strategic role as part of the implementation of the Internal Quality Assurance System (SPMI). This evaluation serves not only as a quality control tool but also as a means of continuous quality improvement. Through the evaluation of study duration, higher education institutions can identify academic and non-academic barriers that affect students' timely graduation.

The Universitas Persatuan Guru Republik Indonesia, Semarang (UPGRIS), as a higher education institution committed to continuous academic quality improvement, needs to conduct periodic and systematic evaluations of students' study periods. This evaluation is crucial given the dynamic nature of student characteristics, the complexity of interdisciplinary curricula, and the challenges in delivering teaching and learning, both in Bachelor's (S1) and Master's (S2) programmes.

Furthermore, students' duration of study is an indicator that directly influences the assessment of an institution's performance in the accreditation of study programmes and higher education institutions. Achieving an effective and efficient duration of study contributes to perceptions of graduate quality, institutional competitiveness, and the level of trust among stakeholders, including students, parents, the world of work, and the wider community.

Based on these considerations, UPGRIS has compiled the 2025 Student Study Duration Evaluation Report as a comprehensive evaluative document. This report has been compiled to provide an overview of student study duration outcomes and to analyse the factors influencing them, and to formulate recommendations and strategic follow-up measures aimed at the continuous improvement of the quality of higher education provision within UPGRIS

B. IMPLEMENTATION OF THE 2025 STUDENT STUDY PERIOD EVALUATION ()

The evaluation of the duration of study for UPGRIS students in 2025 was carried out in the following stages:

1. Data Collection

Study duration data was obtained from the Academic Information System (SIA) on 4 February 2026, covering all students graduating from Bachelor's (S1) and Master's (S2) programmes in 2025 across all cohorts.

2. Data Processing and Analysis

The data was processed to obtain the average duration of study per study programme and level of education, and compared with the ideal duration of study in accordance with national higher education standards.

3. Qualitative Analysis

Analysis was conducted to identify factors influencing the duration of study, including academic, managerial, and programme-specific characteristics.

4. Formulation of Recommendations

The results of the analysis are used as the basis for formulating recommendations for improvement and follow-up strategies.

C. RESULTS OF THE EVALUATION OF STUDY DURATION FOR UNDERGRADUATE () AND POSTGRADUATE (MAHASISWA) STUDENTS

Based on the results of data processing, the average duration of study for undergraduate (S-1) programmes involving 2,293 graduates and postgraduate (S-2) programmes involving 2,025 graduates in 2025 is presented in Table 1.

D. EVALUATION AND FURTHER ACTION

Based on the evaluation results, the average duration of study for UPGRIS Bachelor's Programme (S1) students in 2025 is 4.20 years. This achievement generally remains within the reasonable limits of the ideal duration of study, although there are variations between study programmes. The average duration of study for Master's Programme (S2) students at UPGRIS in 2025 was recorded at 2.10 years. The majority of S2 study programmes have demonstrated a duration of study that is close to the ideal duration.

1. The degree programmes with the shortest duration are:
2. Early Childhood Education Teacher Training (3.60 years),
3. Physics Education (3.63 years),
4. Economics Education (3.97 years).
5. Science Education (1.93 years),
6. Educational Management (1.94 years).

The Master's programme in English Language Education showed the longest average duration of study, at 2.97 years, which requires special attention in terms of academic management and the completion of final projects. Meanwhile, several programmes showed a relatively longer average duration of study, including:

1. Regional Language and Literature Education (4.99 years),
2. Mechanical Engineering (4.87 years),

3. Electrical Engineering (4.53 years).

These variations indicate differences in curriculum complexity, student characteristics, and the effectiveness of academic supervision within each programme.

Evaluation of Study Duration for Undergraduate Programmes (S1)

Based on the results of the evaluation of the duration of study for undergraduate (S1) students at the Universitas Persatuan Guru Republik Indonesia, Semarang (UPGRIS) in 2025, the average duration of study was found to be 4.20 years. This figure generally remains within the acceptable range for the ideal duration of an undergraduate programme, yet it reveals significant variation across study programmes.

Study programmes with an average duration of study below or close to 4 years, such as Early Childhood Education, Physics Education, Economics Education, and Law, demonstrate the effectiveness of curriculum management, academic supervision, and a relatively sound process for completing final projects. This indicates that the systems for monitoring academic progress and academic services within these study programmes are functioning quite optimally.

Conversely, several study programmes with an average duration of study exceeding 4.50 years, including Regional Language and Literature Education, Mechanical Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Physical Education, Health and Recreation, and English Language Education, require special attention. The relatively longer duration of study in these programmes is thought to be influenced by several factors, including:

1. The high complexity of the curriculum and the workload of practical courses.
2. Difficulties in completing final projects.
3. The level of academic support is not yet consistent.
4. Limitations in students' time management.

Follow-up on the Bachelor's Degree (S1) Programme

As part of efforts to improve and enhance quality, the follow-up measures formulated for the Bachelor's Degree Programme (S1) include:

1. Strengthening the system for monitoring students' study periods from the early semesters through the mapping of risks of study delays.
2. Optimisation of the role of academic, particularly for students with a low grade point average or slow academic progress.

3. Accelerating the completion of final projects, through the setting of mentoring timelines, regular evaluation of thesis progress, and support with research methodology.
4. Reviewing the curriculum and study load, particularly in degree programmes with the longest duration of study, to ensure alignment between learning outcomes and students' academic workload.
5. Strengthening academic and administrative services to ensure they do not act as barriers to the completion of studies.

Evaluation of the Duration of Study for the Master's Programme (S2)

The results of the evaluation of the duration of study for UPGRIS Master's Programme (S2) students in 2025 indicate an average duration of 2.10 years. Generally, this achievement is approaching the ideal duration for a master's programme and reflects the effectiveness of postgraduate education delivery.

Programmes with relatively short study durations, such as Science Education, Educational Management, and Mathematics Education, demonstrate strong academic performance, particularly in the management of lectures and thesis completion. This indicates the presence of an effective thesis supervision system and academic management.

However, the English Language Education Programme (Postgraduate) showed a relatively longer average duration of study compared to other master's programmes. This situation requires a more in-depth evaluation, particularly regarding the thesis preparation and completion process, students' academic readiness, and the intensity of supervision by academic supervisors.

Follow-up for the Master's Programme (S2)

The follow-up measures formulated for the Master's Programme (S2) include:

1. Standardising thesis completion times by establishing measurable milestones for thesis preparation.
2. Strengthening the thesis supervision system, including more structured supervision scheduling and regular evaluations of student progress.
3. Enhancing students' research methodology skills through proposal clinics and intensive academic support.

4. Evaluating the distribution of lecturers' supervision workload to ensure the thesis supervision process runs more optimally and evenly.
5. Strengthening the monitoring of study duration by postgraduate programmes, as part of academic quality control.

Integration of Follow-up into the Quality Assurance System

All results of the evaluation and follow-up on students' study periods will be integrated into the PPEPP (Planning, Implementation, Evaluation, Control, and Improvement) cycle of the UPGRIS Internal Quality Assurance System. Thus, the evaluation of study periods will not merely be a descriptive report, but also a strategic instrument for the continuous improvement of academic quality.

E. CONCLUSION

Based on the results of the 2025 evaluation of the duration of study at the Universitas Persatuan Guru Republik Indonesia, Semarang (UPGRIS), it can be concluded that the duration of study is generally in the 'good' category. The average duration of study for students in the Bachelor's (S1) programme is 4.20 years and for the Master's (S2) programme is 2.10 years, indicating that the delivery of the educational process at UPGRIS has been relatively effective and is approaching the ideal standard for duration of study.

In the Bachelor's Programme (S1), the majority of study programmes have been able to maintain the average duration of study within a reasonable range. Study programmes with relatively short study durations reflect the effectiveness of curriculum management, teaching, and a well-functioning academic supervision system. However, there are still several study programmes with relatively longer average study durations, indicating a need to strengthen academic oversight, particularly regarding the completion of final projects and the monitoring of students' academic progress.

Meanwhile, in the Master's Programme (S2), the average duration of study shows more consistent performance and is closer to the ideal duration. Nevertheless, variations in performance between study programmes still require attention, particularly in programmes with a relatively longer duration of study, so that the efficiency of thesis completion and postgraduate academic services can continue to be improved.

Overall, the study duration achievements of UPGRIS students in 2025 reflect that the academic system and quality assurance have been functioning well, but still require continuous improvement efforts. This evaluation serves as a strategic foundation for the institution to strengthen policies, monitoring systems, and academic services in order to promote continuous improvement in on-time graduation rates and graduate quality.

F. RECOMMENDATIONS

Based on the results of the evaluation of the study duration of students at the Universitas Persatuan Guru Republik Indonesia (UPGRIS) in 2025, the following strategic steps are recommended:

1. Strengthening the Student Study Duration Monitoring System

UPGRIS needs to strengthen an integrated system for monitoring students' academic progress from the very first semester. This system is designed to identify students at risk of academic delay so that academic interventions can be implemented earlier and more effectively.

2. Optimising the Role of Academic Tutors and Thesis Supervisors

The role of academic supervisors needs to be strengthened through the establishment of supervision standards, the setting of a proportionate supervision workload, and periodic evaluations of the effectiveness of supervision, particularly in study programmes with a relatively long average duration of study.

3. Acceleration and Streamlining of the Final Project/Thesis Completion Process

Study programmes are advised to establish clear and measurable stages for the completion of final projects and theses, accompanied by completion targets for each stage. Support for research methodology and academic writing clinics needs to be enhanced to accelerate the graduation process for students.

4. Curriculum Evaluation and Adjustment in Specific Study Programmes

Study programmes with an average duration of study exceeding the ideal standard need to conduct regular curriculum evaluations, particularly regarding the study load, the distribution of courses, and the balance between practical and theoretical components, so that the curriculum is better adapt to student characteristics and learning needs.

5. Strengthening Academic and Educational Administration Services

UPGRIS must ensure that all academic and administrative services operate effectively, efficiently, and responsively, so that they do not become obstacles in the process of students completing their studies.

6. Improving Academic Literacy and Student Readiness It is recommended the programme to academic, time management, and research readiness for students, particularly at the final stage of their studies, as an effort to support the timely completion of studies.

7. Integration of Evaluation Results into the SPMI Cycle All findings from the study period evaluation and recommendations for follow-up action must be consistently integrated into the PPEPP cycle of UPGRIS's Internal Quality Assurance System, so that the study period evaluation is not merely an administrative exercise, but serves as an instrument for continuous academic quality improvement.
